Nestled into the heart of Wellington is the Naumi Studio Hotel, an Edwardian building that has been polished back to its former glory - but with a few twists along the way. Like the glass-ceilinged lobby equipped with sculptural, floral lamps or the red walled house restaurant with tasseled, art-deco chandeliers. A veritable pastiche of interior moods, it's a space that shouldn't work and yet somehow does. This is a must not miss for any interior design lover.

While we wait to organise our trip to view these spaces in person, we're content enough in adding the images to our Pinterest boards.
